Abstract: This study explores the role of cultural identity in sustaining village-level conflicts in Pombewe, Indonesia, where historical grievances and communal loyalties shape inter-Dusun (inter-village) relations. Using qualitative research methods, including in-depth interviews and participant observation, the study finds that these conflicts are deeply embedded in cultural narratives and social identities, often intensified by concerns over honor and territorial claims. While socio-economic factors, such as resource competition, may act as catalysts, it is the cultural dimensions that sustain long-standing tensions, reinforcing cycles of hostility and mistrust. The findings highlight the need for culturally sensitive conflict resolution strategies that engage community leaders in fostering dialogue and reconciliation. However, as the research focuses on a single village, further studies across diverse rural settings in Indonesia are necessary to identify broader patterns and develop effective interventions. By addressing the cultural foundations of conflict, this study provides valuable insights for policymakers and community leaders working toward sustainable peace in conflict-prone regions.

Dear Melissa Fernandes,

Thank you for your email and for accepting my manuscript, The Role of Cultural Identity in Sustaining Village-Level Conflict: Lessons from Pombewe, Indonesia (Manuscript ID: 3359-EAST-4444), for publication in the upcoming issue of Edelweiss Applied Science and Technology. I am excited about the opportunity to contribute to the journal.

I have revised the manuscript according to the reviewer's suggestions, and the changes include the following:

- Abstract Revision: I have rephrased and expanded the abstract to include the purpose, design/methodology/approach, findings, conclusion, and practical implications, with 156 words.
- Recent Literature: I have updated the manuscript to include recent literature to ensure it reflects the most current research in the field.
- References: I have reformatted the references to comply with the EAST journal's referencing style (IEEE) and ensured all in-text citations are properly listed in the reference section.
- Figures and Tables: I have carefully reviewed the figures, ensuring they are presented clearly and accurately.
- Research Funding: Since this research was not funded, I have not included any funding details.
- Institutional Review Board (IRB) Statement: As this research did not involve human participation, I have included an explanation regarding this in the ethical consideration section.
- Language Proofreading: The manuscript has been proofread by professional colleagues from the university's language center to ensure the English language is accurate and polished.

Additionally, I have attached three files for your review:

- The revised manuscript (clean copy).
- The revised manuscript with track changes.
- The APC payment proof.

Please let me know if anything further is required. I look forward to your confirmation of the revised manuscript and the upcoming publication process.

Best regards,
Adam
